Preface

IN the preface to the second edition of this book, dated June 18, 1922, I wrote: "The necessity of a new edition of this book after a period of eight years will be self-evident to anybody who will compare the two editions. It is not because the first edition is out of print that a new edition is published. It is because of new discoveries made in the period between the two issues, to say nothing of the errors in the first edition, some which are almost inexcusable."

Now after another lapse of twelve years I can repeat this statement as it fits this third edition. The additions and changes are indeed remarkable. Paul Leicester Ford's bibliography now, of course, hopelessly out of date, covered a period prior to 1800. He gave thirty-five issues, locating about the same number of copies. For the same dates the first edition of this book listed not quite one hundred and fifty issues, locating about one hundred and forty-five. The second edition mentioned one hundred and seventy-seven variations, locating actually more than two hundred and ten copies. This third edition lists two hundred and thirteen variations before 1800 and locates two hundred and sixty-six copies. To these figures must be added two hundred and forty-four issues listed between 1800 and 1830, a period not covered by Ford; with six hundred and forty-nine copies located this makes a grand total of four hundred and fifty-seven variations of which nine hundred and fifteen copies have been located.

This third edition of a checklist of New England Primers could truly be called a study in laboratory work. If one were to make a bibliography of an author, say Philip Freneau or Brackenridge or Simms, to mention a few examples, one would, of course, not deserve the title bibliographer if one could not produce a work which would be, say ninety-eight per cent perfect. New England Primers, Almanacs, Indian Captivities and such subjects are slightly different. They went to the very heart of the people and in many cases were as necessary in the house as a chair or a skillet. Therefore, the constant discovery of new copies is nothing astonishing. It is for this reason that anybody who attempts to make bibliographies of such subjects will be constantly reminded of his omissions.

Since a large number of Primers are undated and subject to guesswork as to their proper date, it is self-evident that the knowledge of early American printing has to be used as a supplementary base for the guesswork. Great strides have been made in this respect and what was once purely a speculation becomes now almost a fool-proof assertion. The different issues of the New England Primer are distributed all over the country and it is only natural that one has to rely on the sympathetic help of fellow workers. Here again one is immediately confronted with the tremendous progress that has been made in the last twenty years in library work. In that far-back period one accepted the work supplied by someone else at its face value. Only in recent years has it been clearly demonstrated how few were fitted or had the ability to transcribe properly such a simple thing as a title page, much less collate a work by signatures. This even applied to important libraries. Happily such handicaps have been overcome for to-day all libraries of consequence have competent men or women on their staffs who can not only answer difficult questions intelligently, but, when left to themselves, produce extraordinarily faithful work.

Considerable changes in ownership have again been brought about. Many collections have sprung up where formerly only a few variations were located. A larger concentration of Primers in institutions took place. This is perhaps as it should be. However, private collectors have not been idle as a comparison of ownership will readily show. I have, quite often, been approached as to the question of ownership of the best collection. Naturally such a query is unanswerable. However, compared with fifty years ago wonderful progress has been made for we have a dozen valuable and important collections where previously few could be found. Of libraries, the American Antiquarian Society has made the greatest number of additions and, so far as numbers go, has now the largest collection. Dr. Rosenbach's collection has been moved way up. It is indeed impressive and were it not for the fact that no extremely early issues have come to light he would—assuming he had annexed any such newly found editions—probably have the choicest collection. Wilbur Macey Stone has added a remarkable number of copies to his fine collection. Mrs. Edna H. Little who was not represented at all before owns nearly forty issues now, all probably acquired in the last four or five years.

The most curious fact is the impossibility of locating some New England Primers sold during the last thirty years. They seem to have vanished for all efforts to locate some of them have proven futile. A number of copies located in the first and second edition of this book cannot be found now. Some have disappeared even from libraries, probably due to the crime wave which spread, a few years ago, over all the libraries in the country.

The controversy relating to the use of capital letters and lower case letters was, of course, brought forward again since not many changes in that respect have been made. I am sure this matter is still undecided. No uniformity of opinion can be obtained. The only possible way would be to have each line set in type as it appears. This, of course, would be such a costly proposition that it could not be considered.

Several issues listed in the second edition have been omitted for I have positive proof that they do not belong to the period covered by this book. In a few other cases I convinced myself that a few Primers, listed as variations, were really identical and they have now been unified into one entry. There is a suspicion that this should be done with one or two others. On the other hand, it is very likely that some Primers vary in their typographical set up, which has not been noted. I do not think many errors like this exist. If they do, they are, of course, pardonable. Only if one could assemble all known Primers in one room and make a close comparison, page by page, one could be sure. This, of course, is obviously impossible. The next best thing would, of course, be to have each Primer completely photographed or photostated and assembled for comparison. Here again the expenditures would not justify the procedure.

This edition has been divided as before into two alphabets, the second containing the undated Primers. This still seems to be the best treatment of the subject. Many gross mistakes on dates, made in the earlier editions, have been eliminated.

Notwithstanding what yet is to be discovered on printing in America in the early part of the nineteenth century, I feel that any uncertainty of consequence has been removed.

To facilitate identification of undated New England Primers two special indexes have been added in which all located copies are listed by printers' names and places of publication.

I have to acknowledge my indebtedness for splendid cooperation, proof reading and advice to Messrs. Clarence S. Brigham, Albert Carlos Bates, Wilbur Macey Stone, Dr. A. S. W. Rosenbach, Alfred C. Potter, Douglas C. McMurtrie, Harry B. Weiss, Robert W. G. Vail, Willard O. Waters, Dr. Zolton Haraszti, Robert Lingel, V. Valta Parma, Randolph G. Adams, and Mrs. Livingston, to Harriet S. Tapley, Edna M. Verrey, Mrs. Edna H. Little, Miss E. M. Sowerby. I also owe much to the librarians or keepers of rare books of the Boston Public Library, Massachusetts Historical Society, Essex Institute, Library of Congress, New York Public Library, Harvard College Library, Historical Society of Pennsylvania, American Antiquarian Society, Yale College Library and to many others without whose help this work could never have been advanced to the state in which it is now presented.

To say that I am satisfied with this work would not be telling the truth. For more than twenty years it was my ambition to write a real history of the New England Primer and to give the bibliography as an appendix. However, such a work must again be postponed for I feel reasonably sure that it would take two years of constant work. One would have to visit all libraries and photograph many titles and pages. A real book on the New England Primer, therefore, has yet to be written. It would have to be divided into many sections of which the pictorial history probably would be the most interesting. To compare the various illustrations, to show the evolution of the pictured alphabet, to investigate the woodcutters, etc., would be a pleasant and profitable task. It would be a little harder to write the theological history of the New England Primer for an intense knowledge of the various chisms would be required. Then, of course, the history of the printing of the New England Primer has by no means been fully told. The same applies to the publishers. While naturally New Englanders should have been responsible for the largest output it would be pleasant to investigate why one hundred and sixty years ago a few were issued suddenly in London, but it would be still more interesting to follow up the comparatively large number of issues that came from Glasgow, Scotland. Why did none come from other British printing centers? If one only had no debts and a Guggenheim Fellowship or some sort of an endowment, certainly one could do interesting work.

Lastly I want to say a word to those who consider the collecting of New England Primers an asinine proposition and who dismiss this greatest little book in the most sarcastic manner. I think they are absolutely unjustified in taking this attitude, for the little item is the most fascinating object to behold if one wishes to go into the cultural and sentimental mysteries that lay behind it. After all, one must also consider that, for almost one hundred and fifty years, this miniature of a book was the sole elementary, educational factor that laid the foundation and was responsible for the ultimate development of the mind of the founders and ancestors of these United States.

Introduction

THE earliest books named "Primers" contained Devotions for the Hours, the Ten Commandments, the Lord's Prayer, some Psalms and other matter pertaining to information or instruction in Christian knowledge. They date almost back to the invention of printing. As the knowledge of the art of printing spread, production of books became less expensive. The desire for learning, probably always manifest in the people, was, in centuries back, mainly confined to the desire to be able to read. Soon an alphabet was included in the Primer to enable them to fulfill this ambition. Later the name "Primer" was given to all elementary books for children.

Although for hundreds of years details of contents of the Primers varied, material "for the more easy attaining the true reading of English," and the teaching of religion continued in them side by side. As years rolled by these teachings were put in a very effective and masterly form. Whoever tried to control religious teachings, found in the Primer an extremely valuable medium for influencing the minds of those not yet instructed.

Thus it came about that a large number of different Primers were issued. But not before the end of the reign of James II could people have such Primers as they chose. And many a printer, prior to this King, and some during his reign, were imprisoned, whipped, fined and even put to death, for issuing books not authorized. Such books were confiscated and destroyed, which accounts for their rarity today.

It would be extremely interesting to possess some of the Primers that the Pilgrims must have brought to New England, for, no doubt, most of them were not printed "cum privilegio regali." For the individualism that developed so quickly among the Puritan settler in America must have abounded in them prior to their setting out for New England. At any rate, the "Reverend Teachers" John Cotton, Seaborn Cotton, John Eliot, James Fitch, John Fiske, the Mathers, James Noyes, John Davenport, Thomas Shepard, Samuel Stone, and others formulated their own faith in a Catechism. Not only these divines, but almost every New England minister, prepared one or more catechisms. These multitudinous Catechisms did very little toward the instruction of the children, but resulted in a profusion of church quarrels, which were so plentiful in New England in the seventeenth century and afterwards.

Under such conditions the New England Primer came about. Its authorship and the date of the first issue are still mysteries that have baffled the research of all antiquarians. Thanks to the discovery of Mr. Worthington Chauncey Ford some time ago, among some old manuscripts, we can date the history of the New England Primer a few years farther back than we could heretofore. In the Stationer's Register of London, under date of October 5th, 1683, a Master John Gaine entered a title, in accordance with the statute requiring the registration of all books for sale:

Mr. John Gaine.

Eodem Die et Anno. Entred then for his Book or Coppy	}vj d
Entituled the New England Primer or Milk for babes.
Witt Wm. Scoresby
	Jno Gain.

Has this discovery upset our theories about the authorship of the New England Primer, or are we confronted with a puzzle that may be easier to solve than we think? We always supposed that Benjamin Harris, a London bookseller, who suffered the pillory in 1681 for printing a "Protestant Petition," and who came to Boston in 1686, was the author and probably the first printer of the New England Primer. This theory seems to be upset for a moment by Mr. Ford's discovery, which puts "Master John Gaine" ahead of Benjamin Harris. Investigation of the activities of this "John Gaine" has resulted in but very little positive material. Nothing seems to be known about his life, and only five books are registered by him as publisher. Mr. Ford, who in his book on the Boston Bookmarket relates all the facts about John Gaine that could be produced, is very reluctant to make any conjectures.

Of course, Mr. Ford was writing a scientific book and had to be cautious. But in writing the introduction to this bibliography, I am not hampered, and can ask the question that perhaps was in the mind of Mr. Worthington Chauncey Ford.

Are John Gaine and Benjamin Harris the same? Once asked, a multiplicity of details enter this hypothetical question and complications appear which can not be discussed here.

The next mention of the New England Primer that was unknown until Mr. Ford's essay on the Boston Bookmarket appeared, we find in a note written by the London publisher, Richard Chiswell, to John Usher in Boston, April 13, 1685. Chiswell says:

"There is not one New England Primer in London, if they will Take Ten Grose and send over a book to print it by they may be furnished, less than that Number will not Answer the Charge."

Could it be possible that John Gaine or Benjamin Harris printed only one edition in London of the New England Primer? In 1686 Benjamin Harris arrived in Boston and became the proprietor of a Book and Coffee Shop. He was very enterprising, published many pamphlets, broadsides, and started the first newspaper printed in America.

The next printed evidence of the existence of a New England Primer is found in Henry Newman's Almanack, entitled "News from the Stars," printed by R. Peirce for Benjamin Harris at the London Coffee-House in Boston, 1690|1 (and consequently printed late in 1690). On the leaf of this Almanack is advertised a "Second Impression of The New-England Primer enlarged." I must mention here that in 1687 Harris was again in London, and it is more than curious that in this year John Gaine published in London R. Franck's Philosophical Treatise of the Origin and Production of Things. Writ in America in a Time of Solitudes. After this venture Mr. Gaine disappears.

I owned the Brinley copy of this book once, and thought it possible that it might have been printed in Boston for Benjamin Harris. It seemed to be more crudely printed than the copy in the New York Public Library which, curiously enough, is also a Brinley copy.

The next prima facie evidence we have about the New England Primer is in a book entitled "Saints Anchor Hold" by Davenport, printed in London in 1701. At the end of this book, which was published by Harris after his return to old England, we find an advertisement, and among other "Books Printed and Sold by B. Harris at the Golden Boar's Head in Grace Church St.," "The New England Primer Enlarged; For the more easy attaining the true Reading of English. To which is added Milk for Babes."

I am still inclined to attribute to Harris the authorship of the New England Primer; and for that matter, the first printing of the same.

The POPE, or Man of SIN.

Typical illustration appearing in many New England Primers; also in the forerunner, "The English Tutor"

There is little doubt that Benjamin Harris, before his arrival at Boston in 1686, printed in England the "Protestant Tutor," a legitimate predecessor of the New England Primer, for it contains the alphabet, the syllabarium, the alphabet of lessons, the Lord's Prayer, the picture of the burning of John Rogers, the figures and numeral letters, etc., etc., all of which we find in the New England Primer. There is also little doubt that Harris compiled this work and wrote most of it, for he was a man of ingenuity and wrote much in verse. We also have a Poem from the pen of Benjamin Harris, "The Holy Bible in Verse," which was advertised in Davenport's "Saints Anchor Hold" (London, 1701). This book was reprinted many times, probably, also in New York. The pictures in the copies known are identical with those of the New England Primer.

Rhymed alphabet page from first known New England Primer, 1727

Since no copies of the earliest issues of the New England Primer have yet come to light, we must consider the illustrations in "The Holy Bible In Verse" as the earliest prototypes of the rhymed-alphabet cuts yet known. There is no reason for denying that Harris used these illustrations in his earlier issues of the New England Primer.

Notwithstanding all the fruitless search that has been made, I am confident that some of the earlier issues of the New England Primer will some day come to light.

As it is, we still have to be satisfied with the New England Primer printed in Boston, 1727, as the earliest issue extant. There is no doubt that prior to this issue many thousands of New England Primers were printed. It was practically an institution. It was, next to the Bible, the "stock book" in the bookshops of the towns and the general stores of the village. It was one of the most extensively advertised books and in inventories was often listed by the dozens. Its small size and the handling by a not too careful child, sometimes by several children in the same family, account for its disappearance. Its being so common and so little to the taste of the grown-ups, aside from its slight monetary value, probably prevented the elders from preserving the now so precious volumes.

Franklin and Hall printed, according to documentary evidence, over thirty-seven thousand copies of the New England Primer between 1749 and 1766, and only one of those, printed in 1764, has so far come to light. But Franklin advertised Primers much earlier. If this happened in the—in a sectarian sense—unfavorable locality of Philadelphia, one can imagine what the output must have been in New England. In 1757, Z. Fowle printed, according to Thomas's History of Printing, an edition of ten thousand copies. No copy of this issue has so far come to light. From Portsmouth to Philadelphia there was probably not one printer that did not issue a number of Primers during the eighteenth century. Some occasionally changed the title to "Royal Primer," "Franklin Primer," "Family Primer," "Columbian Primer," "New Primer," or some such title, none of which achieved any popularity.

The variety of titles is, however, small in comparison with the various changes in the text. The text was not only changed to suit the business interests of the publishers, but to keep abreast of the time. Some printers, cramped for space, would condense the Primers by omitting something, others, perhaps for the sake of competition, would add. It is impossible to note all these changes here. Paul Leicester Ford has done this in an admirable way, as far as the available issues went.

As years passed, Kings died, and portraits of other Kings had to be inserted. In 1762 it happened that the cut of George II was used as a portrait for George III. A genuine portrait of George III in a Primer of 1770 was labeled, in 1776, John Hancock. In 1777 we find the correct portrait of John Hancock, and also of Samuel Adams. After the close of the War for Independence the portrait of George Washington came into general use.

In the middle of the Eighteenth Century an Evangelization took place, bringing about many changes in the rhyme and alphabet; and Watts' Songs for Children were included. At the end of the Revolution political material crept in, for it was necessary to include matter brought about through changes in the form of government. The famous print of John Rogers at the Stake underwent many changes in detail, but was retained in all issues. This and other illustrations are very closely interwoven with the history of woodcut illustration in America, and should be made a subject for a separate study. According to Paul Leicester Ford about 1790 a very marked change was made by printers taking some mundane rhymes from an English publication entitled the Royal Primer, describing various animals, with pictures of them. From this source were also taken a "Description of a Good Boy," a "Description of a Bad Boy," and poems on "The Good Girl" and "The Naughty Girl." Their insertion marked the beginning of the end, for no longer salvation was promised to the good and unending fire to the bad, but "pert Miss Prat-a-pace" was to have none of the "Oranges, Apples, Cakes, or Nuts" promised to "Pretty Miss Prudence," and the naughty urchin was only threatened with beggary while the good boy was promised "credit and reputation." Worst of all was the insertion of a short poem which should have made the true Puritan turn in his grave, for instead of teaching that letters were to be learned that the Bible might be read, and that the figures were necessary to find chapter and verse in that work, it said:

This secularizing continued, and once parents found out how much more readily their children learned from the more popular Primers, the religious part of the New England Primer was abandoned and thus the career of this "greatest little book" was ended.

It would be a matter of guess only to say how many Primers have been printed between the years 1680 and 1830. I believe this figure to be six to eight million. Of this number probably less than fifteen hundred are still extant. Considering the remarkable finds that have been made almost every year, I have strong hopes that some earlier Primers will yet be found. This is very much to be desired, as we certainly would like to solve the typographical and literary mysteries connected with the origin of the New England Primer and the history of the first fifty years of its existence.

CHARLES F. HEARTMAN

*To the Publishers of THE BOSTON GAZETTE, &c.

Messers Edes and Gill,

It being my lot to be plac'd in a small parish within this province, where the poverty of the people prevents their hiring persons to teach the children any other Books than those which is chiefly the business of a School Mistress: I have to my great surprize, discovered lately several things which may have a bad tendency, that has crept into the New-England Primer. And altho' it may be look'd upon by many at first view, a trifling affair, yet, with reference to the little tender ones who are to receive the first information of their duty to God and man from that little book; in my humble opinion, cannot be tho't so by those, who have a due regard for their offspring.—What I principally intend to take notice of, are the little Pictures, beginning with Adam's Fall, and ending at Zaccheus climbing the Tree: Which I suppose were at first put in for some good purpose to make children more intent on their book, it being a good means for that end: if this was not the Design it would be difficult to give a good reason why they are inserted. These little Pictures go thro' with the alphabet, and against each letter there is a representation, with two lines of verse to interpret them: But I remember a few years ago the late Rev. Mr. Prince of Bostin, thinking some of them too trifling, had many of the lines with the pictures alter'd to something of more importance, which was tho't to be for the best; for one instance,—instead of the Cat doth play, and after slay against the letter C, it was a representation of the crucifixion of Christ, with these words, Christ crucify'd, for Sinners dy'd: But to my great surprize, these new pictures have now the old verses against them; and thus the representation of our blessed Saviour's going to the cross, when darkness was over the whole earth, has for its meaning the destruction of mice by a cat: What! Are the children to be told that the death of their Redemmer is of no more importance than the death of a mouse! Which is the consequence if there be anything in representations—This is certainly the worst of them, for which reason, it being so shocking, that I am obliged to disfigure the picture with my pen, as much as if it was a Graven Image. Some other representations are very ridiculous, which if you have room you may insert, to shew their folly. I shall put them as they stand alter'd in the alphabetical order — omitting those letters, which are agreeable to the old primers—Letter D, is the representation of the deluge, with these words, a Dog will bite a Thief at Night. E represents Elijah in a cave, fed by the ravens; and has for its interpretation, The Eagle's Flight is out of Sight. F represents Felix trembling at St. Paul's preaching; with this interpretation, The idle Fool is whip'd at School. When we come to K, it represents the rebellious Korah and his company swallowed by the opening of the earth, and this has for its meaning, Our King the Good, no Man of Blood: As for the King, I cannot tell who it must mean; but certainly it does not deserve to be in a Book, which is to be taught the children of the Loyal New-England People.—L represents Lot running from the destruction of Sodom; with this interpretation, The Lyon bold, the Lamb doth hold. M represents Moses leading the children of Israel thro' the Red-Sea; and has against it, The Moon gives Light in Time of Night. N represents Noah viewing the new world after the deluge, and has against it, Nightingale's sing in Time of Spring.—O represents three young pious men, as Obadias, &c. and has against it, The Royal Oak it was the Tree, &c. R represents Samuel at Prayer, against it, Samuel anoints whom God appoints. T represents a young man running away from—what I cannot tell, but was design'd for sin, and has the looks of it, being without a body, and an odd figure to be sure it makes; against it is, Time cuts down all, both Great and Small.—V represents Vashti for her pride being set aside;—the interpretation is, Uriah's beautiful Wife, made David seek his life. The other alterations are immaterial:—I would now ask, What parent would chuse to let their children be instructed in things so erroneous, as some of the above, and neglect troubling themselves, with what is taught them?—Surely it is of great concern, if they prize a good education:—As for the occasion of this imposition, I am ignorant; whatever it be, it ought to be inquired into, and a stop put to it; or perhaps we may still be further imposed on; and soon have fixed over, The Picture of the Man with Spears, the Pope or Man of God, and so many Virtues pointed to, as there are Spokes; Nay, they may still go further, if this is allowed in, and give us the title page of the Spelling Book and Psalter, and the same book contain part of the mass-book, with prayers to the virgin Mary and other saints. But I hope, by your publishing this, it will be a means of preventing any farther designs, and put a stop to those that have gone so far already. I send it to you, as I have not found any erroneous Primers with your names thereto, and hope for the Benefit of the rising generation, you will not omit publishing this, however your business may be incommoded by giving offence, to any of your brother Printers or book-sellers.

—A parent of one of my pupils, informed me, That altho's Mr. S. Kneeland's Name was in the title page of these erroneous Primers; yet he knew from the character that good Gentleman sustained in Boston, he could not be guilty of such a base method to get off his book; but that some young men of that Name in his office, whom he understood the fraternity of book-sellers had set for work, must have done it; whether thro' ignorance or design he could not tell; but however it be, should be glad you would advertise where the Good Primers are to be sold, and whenever the other is published, to advertise that by the name of The Wicked Primer.

Other abbreviations need no explanation. The whereabouts of some Primers listed in the first and second editions of this book could not be located. They have been assigned in this edition to the former owners. When a New England Primer is listed as "not available" it means that at some time or other I had access to the same but have since lost trace of it, or was not permitted to use the owner's name. A considerable number of Primers held by dealers have not been listed for reasons of constantly changing ownership. Exception to this rule is, of course, made when the Primer is unique. Portraits or other frontispieces have not been mentioned separately, as they are in every case a part of the signature. A number of New England Primers listed on the following pages are more or less imperfect. This has not been mentioned in each or any case since the subject of this bibliography was more apt to suffer through mutilations than any other printed product—almanacs and Indian captivities perhaps excepted. Dates assigned in parentheses to undated Primers are not guesswork, but present the combined opinion of many experts together with the compiler's great experience through handling imprints. In some cases the printers worked at an earlier or later period than the dates given.

Since printing this checklist, No. 8 and No. 119 have gone into the possession of Dr. Rosenbach.

When thou prayest, enter into thy closet, and, when thou hast shut thy door, pray to thy Father which is in secret, and thy Father, which seeth in secret, shall reward thee openly.

☞ My son, know thou the God of thy father, and serve him with a perfect heart, and with a willing mind; for the Lord searcheth all hearts, and understandeth all the imaginations of the thoughts: if thou seek him, he will be found of thee; but if thou forsake him, he will cast thee off for ever.

At least eight different issues of this Primer seem to be known. They show woodcut variations and typographical errors corrected. They all fall between the above assigned dates. This is notwithstanding the fact that a dated Primer of 1792 by James Loring exists. The partnership between Manning and Loring lasted from 1793 to 1815. None of the above located Primers were printed before 1793. I am positive that all the Primers printed by Loring, which have been catalogued in various Auction Catalogues, etc., including Hurst, should be assigned to the period of 1814 to 1830, and some, perhaps, later than that.

Since the "Loring Primers" are not particularly interesting, and many copies can be located, no attempt has been made to describe the differences, which would not add materially to our knowledge of the New England Primers. The reproduction was made from the copy in the Huntington Library.

Mr. Wilbur Macey Stone has record of 19 offers or sales ranging from $1.50 to $25.00. I must have owned at least as many.
